

COLUMBIA SPECTATOR

ARCHIVE

Columbia Daily Spectator, Volume CXXXI, Number 132, 6 December 2007 — EVENTS [ARTICLE+ILLUSTRATION]

EVENTS

TUESDAY: College News Briefs

Drug Addiction? No!

Dr. Ulrike Heberlein of the University of California, San Francisco's Department of Anatomy will speak at CUMC in an event titled "Of Flies and Mice: What Have We Learned About Drug Addiction?" Come learn more about the effect of drugs on our bodies and why we become addicted to them.

*Today, 12 pm
Columbia University Medical Center
Neurological Institute Alumni Auditorium*

Tree Lighting Ceremony

Get into the holiday spirit at Columbia's annual Tree Lighting Ceremony and Yule Ball! Take a break from studying and join your friends and classmates for free food, music, and dancing.

*Today
6 p.m. College Walk
7 p.m. John Jay Lounge*

Art Against AIDS

Come to an art exhibition featuring pieces by Columbia students and local artists, murals made by elementary school students, and photographs taken by South African children affected by AIDS. Refreshments will be served, and all proceeds go to the Keep a Child Alive Foundation, which builds orphanages in Africa.

*Today, 7 p.m.
Wien Lounge—$5*

WEDNESDAY: Column

THURSDAY: According to a New Study

FRIDAY: Crime Blotter

